During the depression, the D.M. Sears Company went bankrupt, which is where he used to ship the cucumbers to be pickled, leaving Ralph with no place to sell his pickles. He and Anna started processing pickles in their kitchen until sales became large enough that the barn was converted into a factory. In those days, they sold their products under the St. Joe Valley Brands label. In 1948 when Ralph's son Frank finished college and committed to the family business they decided to concentrate on retail sales and the Sechler's brand was established. Our original product, Genuine Dills, is still on the shelves, unchanged since the twenties and the Candied Sweet Orange Strip Pickles have remained a favorite of Sechler's customers since the 1940's. In recent years we have responded to increased popularity of spicier foods by adding Sweet Heat Mixed Pickles and Jalapeno Sweet Relish. Traditions at Sechler's Pickles like original recipes, and fresh, quality ingredients haven't changed. As we like to say, "We could make them faster, but that wouldn't make them better."
